

Seminar on Cross-strait Library Cooperation and Librarian Training

As the world becomes more globally integrated, the need for academic exchange and information sharing has grown. This is nowhere truer than in Chinese-speaking Asia, where economies are working ever more closely together and exchanges between people are increasing. Unfortunately, the smooth flow information among Chinese-speaking areas has been hampered by political, geographical, and language factors, preventing the systematic collection of Chinese-language sources and foreign-language studies on Chinese issues.

In order to resolve this bottleneck, Feng Chia University Library and Tunghai University Library jointly held a Seminar on Cross-strait Library Cooperation and Librarian Training from November 16 to 17, 2002. The seminar brought together librarians and specialists in library and information sciences from both sides of the Taiwan Strait to discuss strategies for promoting closer cooperation between libraries in Taiwan, Hong Kong, Macau and mainland China. The keynote speakers and topics of the seminar are summarized below:
